UHMM....NOPE, NOT HERE!

Callie clocked out of the store at noon for her lunch break. She had one hour to eat lunch, run to the bank, pick up her dry cleaning, return two phone calls and drop off a package at the post office.

She pulled out of the parking lot and onto the street. It was way busier than usual. How will I get all this done and have time to eat? she wondered. Gotta try. No time for errands tomorrow or the next day.

Callie made it into the post office ahead of a woman with a luggage carrier loaded with five extra-large boxes. She had pre-paid her dry cleaning so that stop took just a minute or two. She returned the phone calls as she drove from one place to the other, though uncomfortable doing so - it was getting more difficult to do two things at once since she'd turned 60 the month before and was absolutely feeling her age. She couldn't process things as quickly as she had just a couple of years before.

Callie pulled over to the side of the road and took out her to-do-list to make sure she hadn't forgotten anything. She crossed off each item she'd completed.

- lunch*
- dry cleaning*
- post office*
- phone calls*
- bank deposit*

Callie was suddenly starved. I've got to eat or I'll faint. She spotted a Best

Burger Drive-Thru near the bank. Perfect. I'll grab some food then deposit my check without having to make an extra stop. She glanced at her watch. Twenty minutes left.

Callie prepared her deposit slip while waiting in the drive-thru lane.

"Your order, please." The voice over the intercom brought her to attention.

"Double burger without onion, fries and a Coke. Thank you!"

Callie pulled up to the window, received her bagged lunch, and handed over her payment.

"Sorry, ma'am," the clerk said with a smile. "We don't take deposit slips here, but there is a bank next door."

Callie felt her face grow warm. She took back the deposit slip, grabbed money and paid for her lunch and drove from the burger drive-thru to the bank drive-thru. Maybe it's time to retire and head for the rocking chair, she thought, laughing at herself.

She pulled up to the window. "May I help you?" the woman asked.

"Double burger without onion, fries and a Coke....I mean...."

The teller laughed. "We don't have a lunch menu here," she joked, "but there's a Best Burger next door."

Callie joked back as she handed over her check and deposit slip. "I should have known. Best Burger wouldn't take my deposit slip either."

At the end of a phone call, I told my boss I loved him. I caught myself, but then I started rambling, "Oh my God! I didn't mean that. I absolutely don't love you.... No, I mean, I like working for you, but I know you're married and I'm married, and I'm not flirting so please don't report me to HR...."

At some point, he just hung up!
